

ed from his bed and took his station at once at the pump. The Captain then was pressing for the shore, but it was too late. The scene that ensued, when it became apparent that the boat must be lost, is too horrible for description—the agony of the young, the beautiful, the doomed is too heart-rending. Let us draw a veil over it. Mr Holmes was on the forecastle when the waves broke up the unfortunate boat. Upon this he was providentially washed to shore.

The place to which the survivors swam or were drifted is the island of Ocracoke, at Ocracoke Inlet. It is chiefly inhabited by pilots. Mr Holmes was received with the utmost kindness and attention by Mr Littlejohn, a southern planter, who was spending the summer on the island with his family in lieu of coming on North as had been his custom.

Every attention that could be rendered to the survivors was afforded by this gentleman, by Capt. Pike, and others. But the sea—the sea—it held the stiffening forms of the relatives and friends of those who were left—and while the survivors lifted up their voices in gratitude for their own preservation—their frames quivered at the memory of the past, and their hearts mourned for the loved and the lost with a sorrow that was not to be beguiled.

DREADFUL DESPAIR.—On Tuesday evening, a young and elegantly attired female was seen walking, in an abstracted and melancholy manner, to and fro on the Battery, by the side of the river, near to Castle Garden. A watchman, named Anthony, observed her; but, from the frequent assignments made in that quarter, did not at first pay any very particular attention to her movements. The moon shone out resplendently, discovering every object around almost distinctly as they could have been viewed at mid-day.

A half hour—an hour—passed away.—The lady still continued to walk, occasionally stopping and gazing around her, as if in anxious expectation of being joined by someone, she was then awaiting the arrival of.—At intervals she approached the railing of the parapet siding the river, and the watchman, whose curiosity was now thoroughly awakened, stealthily drew nearer, and observed that she turned shudderingly away from the dark rippling tide she was gazing on, and he heard her exclaim, "My God, it is dreadful, but it must be done!"

The clouds at that moment obscuring the moonbeams, the increased obscurity seemed to give courage to the unhappy girl to execute her dreadful purpose. She suddenly ascended the railing and precipitated herself into the river!

The Watchman immediately cried for assistance, and Mr Marsh of Castle Garden, who, perhaps, the finest swimmer and diver of the age!—disdaining fear, and anxious only to succor "beauty in distress"—hearing his call—ran to the spot and leaped into the water to the rescue. He was fortunate in seizing the floating girl ere she sank, and, with the lovely burden in his arms, safely obtained terra firma!

Upon being questioned as to the reasons of her committing so rash a deed, she only moaned bitterly, and at intervals ejaculated "Oh dear, God!" She gave her name as Fanny Bradley. Nothing further could be obtained from her.

NEW-PALEMY ACADEMY.

The building belonging to this institution containing the School Rooms, Library, and Philosophical Apparatus, was entirely consumed by fire on the 4th inst. The fire took through a defect in the chimney. A heavy gale of wind, the progress of the fire when first discovered, the lack of an engine, and the difficulty of supplying water, rendered it impossible to save the building. The boarding house was in imminent danger, but by the spirited exertions of the inhabitants it was saved by material injury.

The fall term commenced just one month previous to this calamity, and the school was in a flourishing condition, the Trustees having procured, by liberal compensation, highly approved and persevering teachers. The regular exercises of the school were interrupted for one day only.

The hall in the boarding house has been divided into two school rooms, and fitted up in a manner to be very comfortable for the cold season. A new building will be erected and finished as soon as the proper season of the year returns.

There are four terms, of equal length, in a year, in this institution, and a vacation of two weeks after each term. New Salem Academy was incorporated many years since and has generally had a high reputation, but never more deservedly than under its present teachers.—[COMMUNICATED.]

AN AMERICAN LADY LAFLETTTE!—The abused, betrayed, but still devoted wife of Clark, who is under sentence to the State Prison, went to Jail this forenoon to take leave of her convict husband, who was to start for Sing Sing this afternoon. She was admitted to his cell and after an hour's interview retired, apparently overwhelmed with grief. With her face buried in her handkerchief to hide the tears she did not shed, she turned upon the culprit. Some half hour afterwards, upon a closer examination, the turnkey found Clark, in the wardrobe of his wife, had fled, leaving her in the cell as his hostage! The whole posse of sheriff and constables were instantly mustered, and are in full cry after the fugitive.

Albany Eve. Journal.

The Norfolk Herald says there is no such gentleman as OLLENBOCKENOFFENOFFENOFFENOFFEN, Esq., thereabouts, whom the papers have lately married to widow MARY SLANLEUTE; and that it is well there is not, as the citizens would be unable to treat him with proper respect, owing to the utter impossibility of pronouncing his name.

EDITORIAL LABOR.—The wife of one of the editors in Augusta, Geo., has lately presented her husband with four pretty boys.

ELEGIAIC LINES TO FRIENDS AT A DISTANCE.

Alternate seasons pass in swift career;
And time, with silent speed, closes the year.—
But not to me, return those cheering rays,
Whose soft effluence blest my former days:
But not to me, return that serene light,
Which once around me shone, serenely bright.
Ah! who can cheer affliction's clouded morn,
And from his wounded bosom draw the thorn?
Who can restrain the gushing tides of woe,
When tempests beat,—when raging billows flow?
What hand, unseen, can mitigate my grief,
Bind up my wounds,—administer relief?
Celestial mercy pours the lenient balm,
Controls the storm,—and hides the sea he calm.

Consoling fondness once around me smiled,
My pleasures heightened, and my cares beguiled:
Sweet consoling from a partner's lips I drew,
And felt her precepts, mild as morning dew;
Her faith, her hope, her charity, her love,
No heights could alter, and no depths remove.
From Virtue's fields she culled the choicest flowers,
And blest with many joys, my fleeting hours.—
Such were her virtues, that from them we gain
Relief in mourning, and respite from pain,
Such Love and Virtue, with such care to please,
If Love could err, was loving to excess.
Serenely mild, and in a calm composed,
No storms of passion ever swelled her breast;
Wise to conceal,—or speak the faults she knew,
She always to my benefit was true.

Nor was she vain;—nor stained with those neglects,
In which some learned females lose their sex.
Devotion often did its power diffuse,—
Soul of her soul, and temper of her muse.
With joy, I recollect her fervent prayers,
Submissive, offered to the Father's care;
When God, no doubt, became her frequent guest,
And kept in calmness, her adoring breast.
Her words, though few, were close and weighty too;
I ne'er could blame,—but mourn that were so few.
Off from my cheeks she wiped the pensive tears,
And blest with nameless joys my happiest years.
Her time, her talents, and her life were given,
To be admired,—and then removed to heaven.
And this fair picture vanished from my eyes,
To gain a perfect touch, within the skies.

Alas! she's dead. She can't to me return.—
I'm left, in plaintive strains, my loss to mourn.
Ye friends, who knew the pleasant path she trod,
And marked her meek submission to her God!
Come, bend with me, o'er her sorrowful shrine;
Her death commands your grief to mix with mine.

PARENT of all, to THEE my prayers ascend,
And in THY glorious presence, LORD, I bend.
Although from me she's called to dwell with THEE,
A portion of her spirit grant to me.
With THEE our early covenants were made,
And my frail, troubled soul on THEE is stayed;
Thou say'st "afflictions spring not from the dust."
Thy word is truth, and on that word I trust.
My partner's life was in thy holy hand,
And all my comforts are at thy command.
May all our sorrows, which no words can paint,
Retire, for exercises of the saint.

Through death, thou sudden, stepping in between,
Has drawn this sad curtain o'er her life's scene.—
Teach us to leave these chambers of the dead,
Their solemn silence, and deep, sandy, shade,
And trace thy aspiring spirit to the skies,
Where wider fields, and fairer prospects rise.
Now, far beyond the bounds of earth—seen spheres,
Soft, heavenly music greets her listening ears;
While to her view, all heavenly beauties blaze,
God and the LAMB concentrate all their praise.

Here I would check my too ambitious course,
My thoughts lack knowledge, and my words want force.
What holy pleasures now pervade her breast,
Can only be explained by being blest 'd!

The foregoing lines are copied from an original manuscript, and humbly inscribed to the bereaved Mr. Z. Z. DICKSON, his connections and friends, hoping to contribute to their rational consolation, in their recent deep affliction. From their sympathizing friend.

THE STEAM PACKET HOME.

The Concord, (N. H.) Statesman publishes the following extract of a letter from C. C. Cady, of Lancaster, one of the survivors of the late catastrophe. The charge against the Captain of the Home remains to be proved.—

"All went on well till Sunday noon, when the sea was heavy and the wind blew hard; but we were told there was no danger. The wind continued, and Monday was a sorry day—all wore long faces—heard no remarks but in regard to our situation. At about 5 o'clock our fears were increased—the boat began to leak, and our Captain lay drunk in his office!! Luckily we had two experienced sea Captains aboard, who took the command, and then immediately ordered all hands, male and female, to dipping water, which order every one complied with, till we found ourselves on deck. Then it was that a scene occurred, which I pray God I may never again witness. One hundred and forty souls screaming, waiting, dying—some crying to wives—some to mothers, some to daughters and sons—some imploring mercy from on high—some frantic with agony, rushing themselves amidst the crumbling wreck. I stood on the wheel house, next to a man and his wife, and such pitiful groans as came from the poor creatures is wholly indescribable. Close by me, also, stood a woman with a child, and as she hung on the wreck with one hand, and her darling in the other, a surf came and washed her child from her; and such was her fright that she leaped, and with the most piteous scream, exclaimed, "O my child," and disappeared forever. I remained till the last one, and was fortunate enough to be one of the few survivors. After reaching shore, I immediately commenced hauling in trunks and bodies, and was fortunate enough to find old Mrs. Lacoste, about half covered with water, just expiring, and saved her life. Presently I found others who were as fortunate as myself, and we divided—part went for assistance, and part kept on shore watching for trunks and bodies.—The wind blew violently, and being drenched with water, and some of us entirely naked, could only keep alive by traveling.—The two ladies who were saved, we carried to a sand bank, and covered them mostly in sand. But a few escaped without being badly bruised. In this condition we remained till daylight, about six hours; you may judge our feelings. At daylight we found ourselves on Ocracoke Island, among a set of savages. There were a few families who did every thing in their power to relieve us, but most of them appeared indifferent, and only visited us to see what they could steal. But very little of the baggage came ashore, and what did was so badly injured that it was not worth saving.

From the Vicksburg (Miss.) Sentinel of the 28th ult.
LYNCHING.—This incarnate demon of outrage, violence and blood still continues to disgrace our unhappy country. It is only a few weeks since humanity was shocked by a most atrocious and revolting outrage, inflicted by those sanguinary spirits of barbarism, the Lynchers, on the person of a Mr. Saunders, of Madison County in this state. These enemies of the peace of society, of order, law and civilization, dragged this respectable planter from the bosom of his family and mutilated him in the most brutal manner—maiming him most inhumanly, besides cutting off his nose and ears, and scarifying his body to the very ribs! We believe the subject of this foul outrage still drags out a miserable existence—an object of horror and pity. Last week a club of Lynchers, amounting to four or five individuals, as we have been credibly informed, broke into the house of Mr. Scott of Wilkinson County, a respectable member of the bar, forced him out and hung him dead on the next tree. We have heard of numerous minor outrages committed against the peace of society, and the welfare and happiness of the country; but we mention these as the most enormous that we have heard of some months.

It now becomes our painful duty, as conductors of a free press, to notice a most disgraceful outrage committed by the Lynchers of Vicksburg, on Sunday, against the majesty of the laws, the honor of the country, the prosperity and happiness of the people. The victim of this cruel and ferocious spirit in this case was a Mr. Grace, formerly of the neighborhood of Warrenton, Va. but for two years a resident of this city. He was detected in giving free passes to slaves, and brought to trial before a justice of the peace, unfortunately for the wretch, either through the want of law or evidence, he could not be punished, and he was set at liberty by the magistrate. The city marshal, seeing that a few in the crowd were disposed to lay violent hands on the prisoner in the event of his escaping punishment by law, resolved to accompany him to his house. The Lynch mob still followed, and the marshal finding the prisoner could only be protected by hurrying him to the jail, endeavored to effect that object. The Lynchers, however, pursued the officer of the law, dragging him from his horse, bruised him, and conveyed the prisoner to the most convenient point of the city for carrying, their blood-thirsty designs into execution. We blush while we record the atrocious deed—in this city containing 5000 souls, in the broad light of day, this aged wretch was stripped and flogged, we believe without hearing of the lamentations and the shrieks of his afflicted wife and children.

Vegetable Strengthening PLASTER.

A SURE preventive for Gout, Rheumatism, Pain and weakness in the Breast, Side, Back or Limbs if applied in season. It is also highly useful in liver complaints, dyspepsia, coughs, colds and difficulty of breathing—giving relief by its warming and soothing qualities.

This article, which has been used more than twenty years in private practice—during which time it has proved itself an invaluable article—is now offered to the public of superior merit.

In using this plaster, no interruption in regular habits is required; and it does not render a person liable to take cold—and being already spread upon soft leather, the trouble and vexation attending the spreading of plasters by persons unacquainted with, or having no conveniences for so doing, are avoided.

Persons leading sedentary lives, or those whose business require a bending or stooping position—and consequently are more or less troubled with pains in the breast, side or back—will find immediate relief by applying one of these plasters to the parts affected. Those afflicted with Rheumatism will find most quieting relief in the use of these plasters, as they create a warmth and action to the parts to which they are applied.

The recommendation following is from one of our most respectable citizens:—

"Hartford, Nov. 6, 1836.

Sir—Having been afflicted for many years with pain in my head, neck, and about my shoulders, by what is called "nervous affection," accompanied, as I suppose, with rheumatism, I had made use of many prescriptions, to little effect. Recently observing your advertisement of the Vegetable Strengthening Plaster, I obtained one, which you kindly fitted to the neck and between the shoulders, from which I have derived a quieting relief, and would therefore commend the article to persons who are afflicted with similar complaints.

Respectfully,
BENJ. HASTINGS."

Prepared and sold by JAMES B. GILMAN, Druggist and Apothecary, Hartford, Conn.; also for sale by DUTTON & CLARK, Brattleboro, Vt.; S. PLUM, West Halifax, Vt.; JONES & FRANKLIN, West Dover, Vt.; and H. & W. Goodnow, Whitehall, Vt.
